Suffolk County Reentry Initiative

The Suffolk County Reentry Task Force (SCRTF) is one of 18 counties in New York State funded through the New York State Division of Criminal Justice Services (DCJS) as part of a larger statewide reentry initiative. The initiative is derived from a model developed through the National Institute of Corrections (NIC) "Transition from Prison to Community" or TCP.

SCRTF coordinates services in the community for individuals returning from a period of incarceration in a state prison.

What is Reentry?

Reentry is the successful reintegration of persons into the community following their release from incarceration. Reentry requires the commitment of the person returning from incarceration to work in cooperation with the community, criminal justice system, service providers, family, and other important providers to secure housing, treatment, education, employment, and other services needed to live a productive and successful life.

Mission

The mission of the Suffolk County Reentry Task Force is to promote public safety by creating a comprehensive approach between community resources, law enforcement and correctional treatment that will redirect the lives of formally incarcerated individuals at high risk for remaining involved in the criminal justice system. The work will be done by targeting needed services and treatment to the root factors that have been determined to contribute to criminal behavior.
